SL: do this first thing in the morning and watch your blood sugar drop

More than 100 million Americans suffer from some sort of blood sugar issue, maybe you're one of them...

You go to the doctor because you're tired, lack energy, or can't seem to lose weight - and they give you the bad news.

They say, your blood sugar is way too high and you'll need to take medication.

Here's why that happens.

When you eat anything that contains sugar, it enters your blood rapidly. And when blood sugar levels rise, your body hustles to process and clear that sugar from your blood.

To do that, your pancreas releases the hormone insulin. And insulin allows the sugar to leave your blood and enter your cells, giving you energy. As the cell absorbs the sugar, your blood sugar goes down.

But this process doesn't work perfectly for everyone.

Over time, your body becomes less sensitive to insulin and loses its ability to clear sugar from your blood. And because your body now thinks there's a sugar shortage, the sugar that DOES get into the cell is quickly stored as fat.

That's when the cravings kick in...

Now you're gaining weight, feeling tired, and lashing out with irritability. Feeling hopeless about your "blood sugar" situation.

And you know that if your body can't clear your blood of excess sugar, complications are sure to arise.

Not to mention having to take medications in an effort to keep your blood sugar lower, only to have your doctor UP the dosages over time or add a second or a THIRD medication. It's not sustainable.

Soon blood sugar issues take control and dominate your life and other health problems arise.

Well, I'm here to tell you that even in the worst cases of high blood sugar there is hope.

So what's the long-term solution to fixing your body's response naturally?
